Protector Known Space Larry Niven

Protector is a 1973 science fiction novel by American writer Larry Niven, set in his Known Space universe. It was nominated for the Hugo in 1974, and placed fourth in the annual Locus poll for that year. The work fleshes out a species called the Pak, originally introduced in a 1967 story called "The Adults", which forms the first half of the novel; the second half is titled Vandervecken. The Pak also appear in several of Niven's later works, including the later volumes of the Ringworld series an

Protector (novel) - Wikipedia

Larry Niven's novel Protector is good, solid, science fiction like they don't write anymore. It depicts man's first contacts with extraterrestrials about two and four centuries hence. It is a novel of ideas: some futurology, some philosophy, some fantasy anthropology. It presents a consistent world that we can easily understand.

Pak Breeders and Pak Protectors are two developmental stages of fictional life in Larry Niven's Known Space universe. The Pak first appeared in "The Adults," which appeared in Galaxy in 1967; this story was expanded into the novel Protector by Larry Niven (1973). The Pak also appear in several of Niven's later novels, notably those set in the Ringworld. ...

Pak Protector - Wikipedia

Though it seems like the concept of the Pak Protector was an interesting thought experiment that Niven decided to create a whole story about, the idea is interesting and works very well. The only complaint I have is that though the Pak do factor in to many of the other Known Space books, none of his other books seem to continue on with this one.

Protectors represent the final stage of maturation for the Pak and other hominids which follow the same maturing process. The Protector form is achieved when a breeder stage hominid consumes the virus present in Tree-of-Life. A Protector is described as a 'fighting machine,' with armor-like skin, super-human strength and super-human intelligence. Protectors originated with a species called Pak ...
